

Nebraska Weed Control Association president Todd Boller on the left presents Brent Meyer, Lancaster County weed control this award for 2016. The following was read prior to the award, "Our final award for this evening is Superintendent of the Year for the State of Nebraska for 2016. This superintendent has a great passion for the weed world, and is making great strides to help our organization statewide. He is active in the Lower Platte Weed Management Area group. He and his staff create the tests, prints and corrects them for each NWCA training. He is a member of the Play Clean Go national committee, and has worked with dealerships to get noxious and invasive plant education materials distributed to owners of ATV, UTV, boats, and other recreational vehicles. He has spent countless hours working with the legislative committee. This committee worked with Senators, and Larry Dix of NACO, and was successful in obtaining nearly one million dollars per year for competitive invasive species projects across Nebraska. The 2016 Superintendent of the Year for the State of Nebraska is Brent Meyer of Lancaster County."

The award was presented at the 70th annual N.W.C.A. conference held recently in Kearney.
